Woman was born of a desire to see the world through a woman's eyes. Then the questions started to flow. What are the stages marking woman's passage from little girl to 80-year-old grandma? What are their dreams and hopes as well as her greatest fears and scars, What does she expect of life society and men? What is a woman's relationship to her body and to seduction? What part do appearances and beauty play in her life? How does motherhood change her life? What do we know of female desire, and why do certain cultures find it is so frightening?

Weak, stupid, talkative jealous, frivolous and hysterical, or else delicate, sweet, devoted, modest: all these things are allegedly part of woman's "nature". But are they really?
